

Abstract of the Disclosure

A connection request from a client is received to distribute one communication within a series of 5 communications to any of a plurality of relay devices, which can relay the one communication, in correspondence with the connection request from the side of the client. Whether or not a connection corresponding to the series of communications is established is determined
10 according to an identifier written in the request. If the connection is established, the requested communication is connected to a relay device as a relay destination of the established connection.

FOIA b 7 - D